THE COMMON LOT.

Once in the flight of ages past,
There liv'd a Man :—and who was he ?
Mortal ! howe'er the lot be cast,
That man resembled Thee.

Unknown the region of his birth,
The land in which he died unknown ;
His name hath perish'd from the earth,
This truth survives alone :

That joy and grief, and hope and fear,
Alternate triumph'd in his breast :
His bliss and woe—a smile, a tear !
Oblivion hides the rest.

The bounding pulse, the languid limb,
The changing spirits rise and fall ;
We know that these were felt by him,
For these are felt by all.

He suffer'd—but his pangs are o'er ;
Enjoy'd—but his delights are fled ;
Had friends—his friends are now no more ;
And foes—his foes are dead.

He lov'd—but whom he loved, the grave
Hath lost in its unconscious womb :
O she was fair !—but nought could save
Her beauty from the tomb.

The rolling seasons, day and night,
Sun, moon and stars, the earth and main,
Erewhile his portion, life and light,
To him exist in vain.

He saw whatever thou hast seen,
Encounter'd all that troubles thee ;
He was—whatever thou hast been ;
He is—what thou shalt be.

The clouds and sunbeams, o'er his eye,
That once their shades and glory threw,
Have left in yonder silent sky,
No vestige where they flew.

The annals of the human race,
Their ruins, since the world began,
Of HIM afford no other trace
Than this—THERE LIVED A MAN !

From the Federal Gazette.

SOME REFLECTIONS ON THE LATE ARMISTICE.

It appears that the first and greatest result of the battle of 7th July, was an armistice of 30 days ; by which to obtain the citadels of Gratz and Brunn, and a few leagues of territory from the Austrians, the French have agreed to cease military operations, even in Poland as well as Germany, and restore the provisions and arms, with the garrisons of the citadels, to their enemies. As a capitulation, this armistice is something like that obtained by Bonaparte at Leoben, when he was permitted to retire from the gates of Vienna, by ceding the sovereignty of Venice, giving up Mantua and all Italy, which the French directory would not however ratify, and it is infinitely more favorable to the Austrians than that granted to the French in Portugal, and for which sir Hugh Dalrymple was lately tried for his life in England.

Such an armistice has never been witnessed until now. In that which followed the battle of Marengo, the arms and magazines were all retained, as well as 16 or 17 fortresses. Peace did not ensue even then, until some time after, and if it followed, the arch duke is always said to have disapproved of it.

It is not yet known by which party the suspension of arms was solicited, or by which it was most desired. It is said the archduke had made such proposals before the battle, and it is not therefore unlikely, they proceeded from him after it, but it is important to remark that, what Bonaparte had rejected before, he assented to after the battle, a change of policy, which if true, could only be affected by a reverse, or the prospect of a reverse to his arms and cause. As to the battle itself, it may be believed to have been one of the most severe ever fought by Bonaparte, since it has compelled him to speak respectfully of his enemy for the first time in his life.

Suspensions of arms being always demanded by the weaker side, it may be considered that, if granted, they are certainly favorable to that side. The stronger has much to lose, and the weaker much to gain by time. So they are also almost always solicited by the power acting on the defensive, and if granted by the other, the advantage of attack, if not rendered equal, the party which before had remained on the defensive, has at least an opportunity of reversing the warfare, if so disposed. That party too which fights at home, maintains the war at much less cost, than its opponent, and recruiting an army from home, by troops which are to be sent to the enemy's country, is itself equal to a little warfare. Every months delay to an invading force is equal to a campaign of the defending army, in respect to disaffection, expence and mortality.

There is some ambiguity in the translations, especially as to the names of places, as well in the copy of the Armistice, as in the French Bulletin giving an account of the battle ; for instance, I cannot discover whether the Sachsengein which was taken on the commencement of the battle, is or is not the same place which was to be delivered by the Austrians to the French after the armistice, called Sachsenburg. But it does not appear that the French had any where passed the limits of Austria more than 3 leagues, and it is well known that this circle or territory extends but a little way north of the Danube, or east of Vienna, where the French had possessed the country before the battle of Elsing on the 22d May. The town of Gratz, and perhaps all but the citadels of the other places, had been taken by the French previous to the last battle, and those citadels were possibly on the point of being delivered up at the time the armistice took place, together with all the artillery and stores within them. Some Austrian troops remaining in the Tyrol and Voralberg, were in the rear of the French, and separated from the main army, as well as from the duke of Brunswick and the archduke John. By the conditions of the armistice, all these scattered troops are saved, and will no doubt be united with one or the other of the main divisions of the Austrians and will with their stores enable those divisions to hold a very different and more imposing front. This must be of the more importance to the archduke, as he seems constantly to have sought those positions, at least for his own division, when he could least defend those countries on which he most relied, viz. : Bohemia, Moravia, and Hungary, and face either the French or the Russian, accordingly as he was attacked by the one or the other, as well as to keep up a communication with Gallicia and Dalmatia.

The delay obtained by the armistice is of more importance to the Austrians, in respect to the allies. If the French could have overrun Bohemia and Hungary in July or August, and dictated a peace, all which doubtless they would have attempted, if it had been thought practicable, after the battle of Wagram, they might have silenced all opposition in the north of Germany, and prevented the English from landing forces in that quarter ; and at the same time they might have sent a powerful army against the Spaniards, As it is, no material obstacle can be thrown in the way of the first, and it is highly probable the French will have been obliged to quit Madrid, if not driven out of Spain entirely, before hostilities can recommence on the Danube and the archduke Charles gives up the present contest. Should this eventually happen, those allies may occupy the conquerer, until Germany is recruited, renewing alternately the contest, or as a whist player would say, and a see saw be established, which will, after calling out every trump, win the odd trick.

A friend to the Independence of Nations.

ARCHDUKE CHARLES.

CAMPAIGN OF THE AUSTRIANS, IN 1796

Extracted from the "Historic and Geographic Atlas," by Le Sage ; published at Paris in the year 1802, during the consulship of Bonaparte ; a work selected by the Commission of Public Instruction for the use of libraries and lyceums.

"At the opening of the campaign of 1796 the French forces formed a great arch, extending from Strasburg to Dusseldorf.—The Rhine, or the Austrian forces which occupied the two banks of that river, formed the chord of this arch, from Spire as far as beyond Coblentz ; Mayence formed the centre, where was stationed the main body of the Austrian forces, with the intention of forcing the centre of the arch, but feebly protected by the French, who, on the contrary, had placed their principal force at the two extremities, with an intention of forcing and out-flanking the Austrian line.

By this it appears, that each, in like manner, meditated an invasion and offensive movements. The French wished to penetrate into Germany ; the Austrians wished to return to the frontiers of France ; and with this intention each party naturally had placed its greatest force in opposition to the weakest part of the enemy. These two plans although the same as to their object, differed much as to the merit of conception. The Austrian plan was defective ; the French presented great advantages. If the latter conquered, they laid open to themselves a defenceless country, abounding with every thing necessary ; they placed the Austrian army in an imminent danger of being surrounded ; should, on the contrary, victory have been on the side of the Austrians, their progress would have been impeded at every step by a chain of fortresses, and they would have been incessantly harrassed on their two wings, by two considerable armies. Such were the plans and the situation of the two armies. Jourdan commanded the French forces on the north ; Moreau those of the south. As to the Austrians, they were entrusted to the command of a young prince, brother of the emperor, till then known only by the merit of his blood, and his distinguished birth ; he had just been appointed to fill the place of Clairfait, whose talents and experience made him one of the ornaments and props of the Austrian army. If Europe at first appeared surprised at such a choice, and yielding to appearances, seemed astonished to see, at so critical a moment the fate of the empire placed in hands so young, that surprise was soon succeeded by admiration, when she beheld those brilliant actions, which discovered in him the hero.

The campaign opened with the month of June, and from the first instant the defects of the plan of the cabinet of Vienna was discoverable. The archduke at first made his way to Mayence with success ; but is immediately interrupted in his course by the disasters of his right wing, driven beyond the Seig and the Lahn. He flies to their assistance, and re-establishes his affairs in the most brilliant manner. Then again his solicitude is excited for the disasters of his left ; general Wurmser had been detached from it with thirty thousand men, which had become necessary in Italy where Bonaparte was commencing his extraordinary and brilliant career. Moreau, skilfully taking advantage of these circumstances, had crossed the Rhine and threatened Swabia. The archduke abandons his success in the north, and precipitates his march to meet Moreau ; less fortunate at this rencontre, he is beaten at Etlingen, and from that moment his position becomes embarrassing, he is obliged to put himself on the defensive, and to give way to efforts made by both wings of the French army ; for it is scarcely necessary to say, that when the archduke returned to meet Moreau, Jourdan had resumed his first march, and his success was complete ; he had crossed again the LEIG and the LAWN, had entered Frankfort, and was marching into Franconia.

In this perilous situation, the archduke determines upon a retreat, throws 25,000 men into the fortresses of the Rhine, and retires before Moreau along the Necker and the Danube ; whilst Wartenslein retires before Jourdan, through Franconia towards Bohemia.

Attentive Europe viewed with anxiety the situation of the Austrians, and the danger of the empire. Military men and politicians sought in vain a relief from certain disasters. It was found in the presence of mind of the young prince, in a stroke of genius of the archduke, he ascended slowly the left bank of the Danube crosses the river of Donawert, burns his bridges & feigns an intention to encamp on the right bank. Moreau immediately moves his army there, precisely as was expected by the archduke, who had left a considerable body of troops to defend the passage of the Leck, and then rapidly descended the Danube at the head of twenty thousand chosen men, recrosses the river at Neubourg, at Ingolstadt, and fell suddenly on the right of Jourdan, who faced the Naab, beyond which he had driven general Wartensleben. The young prince beats the right wing of Jourdan, and from that moment every thing assumes a new aspect, and the empire is saved.—Wartensleben resuming the offensive, repels and beats Jourdan in front, who can never succeed in covering his flank, constantly attacked and out-flanked by the archduke, whose admirable celerity precedes Jourdan incessantly, step by step, into every place of retreat, to Neuremberg, Wurtzburg, Aschaffenburg, wresting from him every place which might cover his retreat, his magazines, in a word all his resources, and forces him to throw himself into dangerous routes, whereby his march is rendered painful, and finally becomes a complete and disastrous confusion.

No sooner does the archduke see that army paralised, than he turns about towards the south, and marches to precipitate attack the rear of Moreau, reinforcing army with the garrisons on his route. he arrived too late : Moreau, by his and courage, had just rendered this effort useless. After having waited some time, threatening Munich and Ratisbon, in hopes of bringing the archduke back and relieving his colleague, Moreau himself, surrounded on all sides, separated from France, deprived of all communication, without information, without hopes without instructions, he had commenced and finally accomplished, one of the most glorious retreats ever known. At the moment that the archduke reached Offenburg Moreau entered Friburg, after having surmounted all the obstacles of nature and the efforts of the enemy : he had the glory of regaining his frontiers with the whole of army, cannon and baggage, without suffering any check or loss, crowned with several victories, and the suffrages of his enemies themselves. The general, even then, endeavored to maintain himself in Brisgau but was forced, after several bloody engagements, to recross the Rhine, and to suffer the archduke to retake the fortress of Kehl and the bridge of Huningen, which closed the season, and brought the armies back to precisely the same positions they occupied in the opening of the campaign.

Such is the sketch of this celebrated campaign, in which the young archduke had the pleasing gratification of seeing himself proclaimed the liberator of Germany, which he has since remained the hope and the idol. In every extraordinary crisis of the Austrian monarchy, all eyes have been fixed on him—twice since, in moments of despair, the empire has been entrusted to him, too late perhaps for success, but not for his glory, because it rests upon solid qualities and amiable virtues, which have early rendered him independent of events.

Extract of a letter dated Kingston, Jamaica, dated August 3.

"We had a few days ago a severe quall or young hurricane, in which several vessels have received damage. Several vessels have been detained by the flagship at Port Royal within these two days, among the rest the schooner Glee, from Phiadelphia under what pretence I cannot learn. Markets, Flour 12 dollars, corn meal 6 to 7, rice 5 per cwt. W. O. hhd. staves 75 per M. 18 inch Cypress shingles, 12 dolls. We have had few or no arrivals, for some time, from the United States, and of course markets are rising."

Idle Report.—Our Philadelphia correspondent observed in his letter of to-days mail, that a report had been put in circulation there, that the American frigate Constitution, (which happens to be now lying in the Sound) had fallen in with a British frigate, given her battle (for some cause unknown) and after a severe contest, had, of course, conquered her, and had, of course, again, carried her in; not one word of which did our correspondent beleive. This report we really should not have thought worth even a mention in the paper, but having accidentally read it to one of those persons who are fond of creating a buz, he ran with it to the coffee-house, and in ten minutes all the democratic quid nuncs, little orators and great orators in town, have got hold of it and are making the most of it, so that it is probable there will be a powow extraordinary this evening at the wigwam to celebrate the great and glorious event.

HUMOR.

Tom Moore, the linen draper of Fleet-street, standing at his door one day, a countryman came up to him with a nest of jackdaws, and accosted him, says, "Measter, "wol ye buoy a nest of daws?" No, I dont want any?" "Measter, (replied the man) I'll sell'em all chape; you shall have the whole nest for noinpence" "I dont want'em (answered Tom Moore,) so go about your business. As the man was walking away, one of the daws popt up his head and cried "Mauk, Mauk," Damn it (says Tom Moore) the bird knows my name. Halloo countryman, what will you take for that bird?" "wohy you shall have him for three pence." Tom Moore bought him, had a cage made, and hung it up in the shop.—The journeymen took much notice of the bird; and would frequently tap at the bottom of the cage, and say, "who are you?" and immediately reply "Tom Moore of Fleet-street." In a short time the Jackdaw learnt these words, and if he waited victuals or water, would strike his bill against the cage turn up the white of his eye, cock his head and cry, "who are you? who are you? who are you? Tam Moore of Fleet street." Tom Moore was fond of gaming and often lost large sums of money. Finding his business neglected in his absence, he had a small hazard table set up in the one corner of his dining room, and invited a party of his friends to play at it.—The Jackdaw had by this time become familiar, his cage was left open, and he hopped into every part of the house: sometimes he got into the dining room, where the gentlemen were at play. One of them being a constant winner, the others would say "damn it, how he knicks'em!" the bird learnt these words also; and adding them to the former, would call, "who are you? who are you Tom Moore of Fleet street, Tom Moore of Fleet street—damn it how he nicks'em!" Tom Moore, from repeated losses and neglect of business, failed in trade, and became a prisoner in the Fleet. He took his bird with him and lived on the master's side, supported by his friends in a decent manner. They would sometimes ask, "what brought you here? When he used to lift up his hands and answer, "bad company by G—d." The bird learnt this likewise, and at the end of the former words would say, what bro't you here?" and (to imitate his master) lift up his pinions and cry "bad company by G—." Some of Tom Moore's friends died, others went abroad; and by degrees he was totally deserted, and removed to the common side of the prison, where the distemper broke out. He caught it; and in the last stage of life, lying on a straw bed, the poor bird, (who had been two days without food or water) came to his feet, and striking his bill on the floor, called out "who are you? who are you? who are you? Tom Moore of Fleet street, Tom Moore of Fleet street, Damn it how he nicks'em! damn it how he nicks 'em! What brought you here? what bro't you here?—Bad company, by G——, bad company, by G——." Tom Moore, who attended to the bird, was struck with his words, and reflecting on himself, cried out "Good God! to what a wretched situation am I reduced! my father when he died left me a good fortune, and an established trade—I have spent my fortune, ruined my business, and am now dying in a loathsome gaol, and above all, keeping that poor thing confined without any support. I'll endeavor to do one piece of justice before I die, by setting him at liberty." He made shift to crawl from the straw bed, opened the casement, out the bird flew. A flight of Jackdaws from the temple was going over the gaol, and Tom's bird mixed amongst them. The gardeners were then laying the plats of the temple gardens, and as often as they placed them in the day, the Jackdaws pulled them up by night. They got a gun and attempted to shoot some of them; but, being cunning birds, they always placed one as a watch in the stump of a hollow tree; who, as soon as the gun was levelled, cried, "mauk, mauk," and away they all flew, so that the man could never shoot one of them. The gardeners were advised to get a net; and the first night it was spread they caught fifteen. Tom Moore's bird was amongst them. One of the men took the net into the garret of an uninhabited house, fastened the door and windows, and turned the birds loose. "Now (says he) you black rascals, I'll be revenged on you." Taking hold of the first at hand, he twists his neck and (throwing him down) cries, "there goes one." Tom Moore's bird, who had hopt upon a beam in one corner of the room, unobserved, as the man laid hold of the second, calls out, "Damn it how he nicks 'em!" The man dropt the bird he had in his hand; and turned to where the voice came from observed the other with his mouth open and calls out, "Who are you?" to which the bird answered, "Tom Moore of Fleet street," The devil you are! And what brought you here?" Tom Moore's bird lifting up his pinions answered, "Bad company by G—d, bad company by G—." The fellow, frightened almost out of his wits, opened the door, ran down stairs, and out of the house, followed by the birds, who by this means saved their lives and gained their liberty.

Domestic Manufactures.

THE subscriber proposes erecting at the Centre Mills, near Alexandria, a Machine for carding Wool, and expects to have it ready to run by the 30th of the present month. It will card the wool and form it into rolls for the spinning wheel, or into batts for hatters, or other purposes. The advantage of having wool prepared by these machines for the purpose of manufacturing into yarn over that which is carded by hand, is generally acknowledged, as being the cheapest and most perfect in its operation. Those persons who may incline to give encouragement to this establishment, may depend on the utmost punctuality as to time and unremitted attention in the execution of the work. The wool when carded into rolls will be packed in such manner as to preserve it in the most perfect state for spinning, and may be transported any reasonable distance without injury. Wool, sent to the carder, must be clean washed, clear of burrs, small sticks or other extraneous matter, and assorted in such manner as may suit the owner; and each quality shall be kept seperate. The expence of carding will be eight cents for that which is made into rolls, and five cents for batts per lb. payable at the time of delivering, or payment will be received in wool of good quality at 40 cents per pound, as may suit the convenience of the owner.

With pleasure I do return my sincere thanks to the above named ladies, and many others who have favored me with their certificates and custom in the purchase of Yarwood's Patent Washing Machine. I find them still in great demand in this place, but finding a very great scarcity of plank to answer the purpose of making them here, I shall in a few days or weeks commence making them to the southward. But will endeavor to supply others at a short notice after my return. I have a few now made on hand, which can be had if applied for soon.

DIRECTIONS HOW TO USE

YARWOOD'S

Patent Washing Machine.

First fill the barrel half full of your finest cloths, than fill the bottom of the Reservoir with hot suds up to the side planks, turn the Crank backwards and forwards so as to make the cloaths fall the hardest against the sides of the barrel for about twenty-five minutes, then use the same suds with a little more soap and hot water for the next finest cloaths, until the suds are unfit for use, then second your cloaths in the same way with boiling suds, after ubbing a little soap on the dirtiest parts of the cloaths; then rince them in the machine in warm or cold water.

Corner of King and Fairfax streets

FOR SALE,

The following VALUABLE PROPERTY.

A TRACT OF LAND,

CONTAINING 1600 acres, more or less, called and known by the name of Buffaloe Marsh, lying within 12 miles of Winchester, in the county of Frederick, in the state of Virginia. On about 900 acres of this tract there are several very well improved farms tenanted for life or lives, the balance free of all incumbrance, including an excellent merchant mill built with stone, the whole yielding an annual rent of about 800 dollars. Much of this tract is very fertile, well watered, and all abundance of timber. It is generally rolling, but part of it is hilly and stoney, chiefly of lime stone. It will be laid off to suit purchasers.

Another tract, called Hollis's Marsh, lying in the county of Westmoreland containg about 2800 acres, bordering on the river Potomac, adjoining the Stratford estate, and the late residence of Richard Lee, esq. of Chantilly. On the estate are a number of farms and tenants at will. Part of this land is extremely fertile, and all of it as good as the lands generally are in that part of the country. The Marsh affords excellent range for stock, and is happily situated for fish and fowls of which that river abounds, and must be a desirable estate to any person who may choose to reside in that part of the country.—It will however be laid off to suit purchasers.

The above lands are held by deeds of purchase duly recorded in the general court,

Another tract containing 992 acres, lying in the county of Berkeley, adjoining the residence of Rawleigh Colston, esq. of which about 660 acres is leased for the balance of the life of an aged man, the rest tenanted at will. This land is situate in what is called the big bend of Potomac, and borders on it. In point of fertility it is esteemed inferior to none in that part of the state and is held by deed from James Marshall, esq.

Seven other tracts containing 1000 acres each, adjoining each other in the county of Mason, within a few miles of the Ohio, between the two Kanhawa's on the waters of Sandy Creek, which runs through a considerable part of it. It adjoins the lands of general Washington, and the late Benjamin Harrison, jun. esq. A large portion of it is rich bottom and the upland of very good quality. It is held under the original patentee by deeds duly recorded in the general court.

Five full & complete Shares in the Dismal Swamp Company.

Upwards of 16,000 acres of Lands, being very old military rights, lying in the states of Ohio, Kentucky and the Indiana territory, chiefly patented in my own name and ready to be shewn.

A more particular description of the foregoing property may be seen by applying to Mr. Thomas Taylor, of Richmond, who is authorized to make contracts, or to myself in Alexandria. The titles are all undoubted, and the terms proposed are, one fourth in cash at the time of conveyance, the balance in three instalments, the last two to be on interest from the date. Any species of the public stock and of the different Banks in the United States of Insurance Companies—of the Potomac Bridge and Turnpike Companies will be received in payment according to their fair value. Ground rents in the city of Richmond and town of Alexandria, or Houses and Lots, will likewise be received in payment according to such rates as may be agreed upon.

VALUABLE LAND

FOR SALE,

Distant 23 miles from Georgetown and Alexandria, 19 miles from Occoquan Mills, and twenty from Dumfries, and within two miles and a half of the Little River Turnpike Road. It consists of Five and Twenty Hundred acres lying on the waters of Bull and Little Rocky runs, in the counties of Fairfax and Prince William. The quality of this land is excellent, and, to a grazier especially, would be a source of great emolument, from the quantity of low grounds: of which there is not less than Five hundred acres, ready, from the strength of the soil, to be sowed in Timothy. This land is decidedly benefitted by the plaister of Paris. On it is a very good scite for a mill, the stream being one of the most constant in that part of the country. There are about 800 acres in wood, heavily timbered. The improvements are, a dwelling house newly fitted up consisting of two rooms below stairs, with a store room and two convenient closets, three lodging rooms above stairs, an excellent cellar, a kitchen, corn house, meat house and stables. Likewise the overseer's house, one in each county, with other necessary houses for negroes, &c.

Between 2 and 300 acres in addition, for sale, in Prince William county, on Bull Run near its conflux with Occoquan. This land lies about 10 or 11 miles from the Occoquan mills, and has nearly one third in woods—its quality is equal to any in its immediate neighborhood.

Persons disposed to purchase may be supplied on the first named tract with a large stock of horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, farming utensils. The subscriber willing to emigrate southwardly will dispose of the above mentioned property on the most reasonable terms.

Information respecting the property may be had by application to the honorable Judge Washington of Mount Vernon, H. S. Turner, Esquire, of Jefferson county, or in the absence of the subscriber to Bernard Hooe jun. Esq. living near the premises.
